

Remote data back up

93 % of businesses that lose their data end up bankrupt
Can you afford to lose everything?

Questioning your current method of backup

Do you currently backup to tape, hard drive, CD or USB? Unfortunately these methods become defective. 77% of tests on tape backup discover failures. KPMG found that data loss caused by hard drive failures rose to 50%.

These methods of backup are flawed because it is only a matter of time before a hard drive or CD fails, leaving you with lost data and no method of backup. They rely on manual processes and can easily fall victim to on-site disasters. In the event of data loss, recovery with these methods is an expensive and lengthy process.

The consequences of risk taking

Companies rely on vast amounts of data, from emails to account details. The National Computer Security Association state that the lack of professional backup typically results in 21 days and £12,566 to recreate just 20MB of accounting data, around a tenth of the data produced daily by an average business.

The consequences are often disastrous. The Strategic Research Institute advises that “companies that are unable to resume operations within 10 days are unlikely to survive”.

Protect your business.

PCM provide us with an excellent service. We are architects, not IT professionals, and if problems occurred with our previous systems, information recovery was not necessarily an easy project, demanding both time and money. Now we can either recover files ourselves quickly and easily, or simply request assistance from PCM to email us the required folders.
